The Disciple Making Process

Series: Discipling the Nations

Hebrew 10:24-25

Sister Barbara White

In the New Testament, disciples were made in the context of relationship and community. Relationships with one another were critical for disciples as they learned to follow Jesus, become more like Christ and share the Good News with others. In modern culture small groups are often viewed as merely a program within the church. However, for the New Testament church, small group community was a way of life, encompassing every area of their lives. Today we will look at what Scripture teaches us about making disciples in a relational setting.
